The license plate reads GUDGREEF, but it’s not a reference to Charlie Brown.

The woman behind the wheel is on a mission. She’s the Reverend Lou Wallace, and her life’s calling has been to help others move forward after devastating loss.

Joining Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG) as a chaplain in 1986, Wallace is recognized as a pioneer in the field of bereavement counseling. Hospices are known for providing grief support to their patients’ families. However, Wallace challenged hospice providers to do more. She established HPCG’s community-based grief program, the first of its kind in the state, offering support to anyone who had experienced the death of a loved one.

Not immune to loss herself, she combined her personal experiences, professional knowledge and empathy to become a recognized expert in her field.

“It was remarkable to watch Lou at work in the midst of her own losses,” said Marcia Vanard, HPCG’s vice president of counseling, education and support services. “Lou was able to acknowledge her own heartache, but she would say the pain didn’t have to stop her from embracing life. She could do both.”

As her supervisor, Vanard would often assign clients coping with the most complicated grief to Wallace.

“She could sit with people in their pain and not hurry them along. She trusted the grief process to unfold for every person in its own unique time,” said Vanard. “She always reminded our counseling team to take note of what our clients could teach us.”

In June of 2011, community volunteer, Rebecca Schlosser, embarked on a journey she never wanted. Her 25-year-old son, David, unexpectedly died following a lengthy struggle with bipolar disorder.

“I was numb, devastated and angry,” said Schlosser. While the weeks that followed were a blur, the grieving mother received notes from friends strongly encouraging her to call HPCG.

“Our son was not a hospice patient, and I wasn’t aware that grief counseling services would be available to me,” she recalled. Eventually, Schlosser followed the advice and called for help.

“Lou Wallace became my guide, listening and helping me understand that my physical, emotional and spiritual responses to David’s death were normal. At a time when it felt like my reason for ‘being’ was over, Lou helped me find my footing,” she said. “We set tiny goals that enabled me to go through the motions of living. She helped me think forward about those things on my journey that might blindside me, like holidays and all those ‘firsts.’ The road map we created, complete with signposts, helped me feel less powerless and less alone.”

“Through my years as a grief counselor and chaplain, I have had the privilege of serving people as they move into new meaning, constructing new lives,” said the Rev. Lou Wallace. “People say ‘I admire you for doing that work. It must be depressing.’ It’s not! It’s affirming, loving care.”

Hospice Pioneer Honored for her Legacy

“First in Flight” GUDGREEF North Carolina
Hospice care has always been revolutionary.

In 1971, the hospice model of care was introduced to the United States, sparking a radical movement that disrupted traditional health care delivery. By 1980, our community formally embraced the concept and established HPCG to support and care for those facing terminal illness. We remain proud to have been one of the first hospices in North Carolina.

As our cover story illustrates, support for those who are grieving also became a fundamental offering. Just as we were learning to provide better care for terminally ill patients, we were developing our skills to support those left behind. Elisabeth Kübler-Ross published her groundbreaking book, “On Death and Dying,” in 1969. Her theory of the five stages of grief was radical for the time.

HPCG had its own pioneer: the Reverend Lou Wallace. Her imprint on our counseling programs is known by so many. In fact, when people discover where I work, I am routinely asked, “Do you know Lou?” The stories they share about what she did for them are profound and clearly life-changing.

All hospices are not alike, and HPCG’s robust counseling and educational offerings set it apart. Our Counseling and Education Center provides grief support and caregiver education to more than 2,000 people each year. Its humble beginnings are credited to the vision of one remarkable advocate—the Rev. Lou Wallace.

We have been fortunate to have many pioneers champion our cause. Some have provided care directly, and some have been leaders. Pam Barrett, HPCG’s first CEO, positioned HPCG as a community resource, developing innovative programs like Kids Path and Beacon Place. Pat Soenksen followed and continued our evolution, advancing our palliative care services, adding the Lusk Center to our campus and strengthening our financial security.

I am excited about the opportunities before us. In today’s rapidly changing health care environment, hospice continues to play a revolutionary role. Our culture is still challenged to have important conversations at the end of life. Modern advances in medicine defy expected outcomes.

I look forward to the role HPCG will play, continuing to build on our rich history of responding to community needs while we help people capture moments that really matter.
When Lemon Meringue is More Than a Pie

“What’s your favorite dessert?” I asked my patient.

As hospice volunteers, sometimes we ask a simple question that unlocks deep memories.

Her eyes widened as she responded, “Lemon meringue pie!” Instantly, she was transported back many years to her cozy kitchen.

“Can you share your recipe?” I replied.

She reached for an imaginary bowl and spoons. Into that bowl, and as she talked me through her recipe, went key ingredients … sugar, flour, salt, lemon juice. “And what is that other…? Oh yes, cornstarch.”

She carefully cracked and separated the eggs into yolks and whites … all in her mind’s eye.

Whisking it into a frothy batter, she poured it into her crust. Still focused, she completed my cooking lesson by whipping the fluffy meringue. Voila! Lemon meringue pie without the calories!

Her cooking lesson prompted me to inquire, “How did you learn that … did your Mama teach you?”

At our next visit, she smiled brightly when I presented her with a slice of lemon meringue pie. I witnessed how a simple question created cherished memories to savor at the end of her life, and for me to hold in my heart.

Sometimes friends ask me, “Is it hard or awkward to talk to someone who is dying?” As trained volunteers, we only have to open our ears and our imaginations. Sometimes, the less we say, the better because we are actively listening for their feelings and distant memories.

Years ago, I volunteered for another lady who requested a day trip to visit her daughter. With special permission from the hospice team, we rode along for hours with only quiet conversation.

Without hesitation, she shared her young husband’s suicide many years ago. A tragic life experience emerged from the darkness as she recalled being a young wife and how others reacted. These conversations with our hospice patients can’t be planned or scripted. They flow from profound memories, sacred places and trust between two people.

Every hospice patient I have been honored to serve as a volunteer, whether years ago or more recently, has opened my heart and enriched my life immeasurably. And in listening to their amazing and sometimes even heartbreaking stories, we respect and cherish their lives.

- Pat Soenksen, Volunteer Retired President and CEO of Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro

Wallace’s compassionate career has left a tremendous legacy.

“Her fingerprints can be seen so many places within our Counseling and Education Center and throughout our organization,” said Vanard. “In fact, Lou authored many of the bereavement resource materials we continue to use today.”

In honor of her work, Wallace was recognized as the 2018 recipient of the Peter Keese Leadership Award by The Carolinas Center (TCC) in September. TCC is a trade organization that promotes hospice and end-of-life care throughout NC and SC.

And in celebration of her legacy, Rebecca Schlosser and her husband, Mike, have seeded an endowed fund to honor Wallace. The Rev. Lou Wallace Fund for Counseling and Education will generate program support for years to come. If you would like to make a gift to this fund, please visit www.hospicegso.org/gudgrief
Every service member’s military experience is unique. What they have gone through varies depending on their branch of service, which conflicts or wars they were part of, their age and the length of time they served. Their experiences can range from positive to negative, and for most, it is a mixture of both.

Husband and wife, Jerry and Carolyn Cobb, witnessed this firsthand. Over the past year, they each had a brother served by Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG). Both brothers were veterans. Carolyn’s brother, David, died at Beacon Place in September 2017, and Jerry’s brother, Clarence, died in September 2018.

David was very comfortable talking about his service as first-class airman in the Air Force. Although he never had to deploy, it was a turbulent time in American history, as he served from 1973 until 1975. The Vietnam War was coming to an end, and the Civil Rights movement had captured the nation’s attention.

“When David enlisted he was just a 19-year-old boy,” said Carolyn Cobb. “When he returned, he was a man. I think his service experience really matured him and taught him a great work ethic that he carried throughout his entire life.”

Despite the challenges David experienced, he had fond memories of his service.

In contrast, Jerry’s brother, Clarence, was an Army medic and was wounded in action. He never wanted to talk about his service. Many in his family had no idea what a highly decorated soldier he was until his funeral. Stories of his bravery came from his fellow comrades who attended. Among his honors, he received a combat medical badge, a good conduct medal and a sharpshooter badge. Clarence was also awarded the bronze star and a purple heart. But he kept much of this to himself.

“It was very beneficial for Clarence’s hospice team to acknowledge and recognize his military service,” said Jerry Cobb. Carolyn agreed that her brother David also benefited from the recognition he received.

As a We Honor Veterans partner, HPCG is committed to providing the best quality care for veterans and their families. Hospice staff may provide the last opportunity for veterans to feel that their service was not in vain, and that they are appreciated. Understanding how veterans view their service, whether it is positive or negative, has implications for how they view the end of their life.

“When I assess a patient spiritually, it is about learning what gives their life meaning and hope,” said Pete Overcash, an HPCG chaplain. “When working with a veteran, it’s especially important to allow for space to build trust and rapport. I have found that asking too many questions can cause a veteran to shut down. When a genuine trust and rapport are established, over time, they are more apt to share about their veteran status and experience.”

America’s veterans have done everything asked of them in their mission to serve our country. At HPCG, we believe that it is never too late to say “thank you.”
You are invited to attend the 34th Annual Light Up A Life Service on Sunday, December 2 at 5 p.m. at First Lutheran Church, located at 3600 West Friendly Avenue. Presented by Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG), this interfaith service offers guests a meaningful way to honor the memories of their loved ones.

The featured speaker will be the Reverend Jay Hilbinger, senior pastor of First Lutheran Church. Born in Fallston, Maryland, Hilbinger earned a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration from University of North Carolina at Greensboro (UNCG) and a Master of Divinity from the Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary in Columbia, SC. He served seven years as associate pastor of Ebenezer Lutheran Church in downtown Columbia, SC, before being called as associate pastor of First Lutheran, Greensboro in January 1999. Hilbinger was named senior pastor of First Lutheran in June 2015, where he remains today. Hilbinger serves as a member of UNCG’s Wesley Lutheran Campus Ministry Board, a role he deeply values for the impact campus ministry had on his own call into ordained ministry. He looks for opportunities to use faith and spirituality to break down barriers and to build bridges between people.

Musical selections will be organized by Melissa Burris, First Lutheran’s accompanist and traditional worship coordinator. Featured musicians include the church’s Handbell Choir as well as Dave Phillips, a violist in the Greensboro Symphony.

After the service, you are invited to view the Hospice Tree of Remembrance that stands in front of the VF Jeanswear Building at 400 N. Elm Street in downtown Greensboro. The tree will be lit during the Festival of Lights on Friday, November 30, and remain lit through December 31.

You are encouraged to place a light on the Hospice Tree of Remembrance by making a contribution of $10 or more in honor of a loved one. HPCG will acknowledge your gift and notify those who are being remembered with a lovely seasonal card. All proceeds benefit children and adults receiving patient care and counseling support at HPCG.

Why Support HPCG?

Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG) cares for all medically eligible patients, regardless of their ability to pay. Insurance covers many of our expenses, but not all. On average, nearly ten percent of HPCG’s program costs are not reimbursed.

In addition to ensuring that no one is denied care due to an inability to pay, contributions allow us to provide services for children coping with illness and loss and to offer grief counseling and educational programs for the community.

Because so many people have asked how they can support our work, we offer the following suggestions:

Celebrate A Special Person.

Memorial gifts and honorariums are an excellent way to support our mission. They also provide family members and friends with an opportunity to celebrate their loved ones.

Memorial Gifts: Families can designate memorial gifts to HPCG by adding a sentence to the obituary— “The family requests that memorial gifts be made to … “ Funeral home staff can help ensure that this information appears in the newspaper.

Increasingly, families are turning to social media to share news of their loved one’s memorial services. Adding a request for memorial gifts to a post, with a link to give, can be an effective way to celebrate a life.

Honorariums: Honorariums offer donors a way to express their appreciation or love for a living family member, friend, coworker or other special person. Many people choose to celebrate their birthday or wedding by asking for contributions in lieu of traditional gifts. Such a contribution is a thoughtful and creative way to support our work.

Organize Special Events.

Due to limited resources, HPCG only organizes two events a year: Corks for Kids Path and Light Up A Life. However, we are the grateful beneficiary of many creative events organized by individuals, businesses, community groups and faith communities. If you are interested in planning a fundraiser to support HPCG, contact us to see how we can help.

Learn more at: www.hospicegso.org/donate-to-hpcg/

Volunteer.

Donations can be gifts of time, talent or treasure. The generous offers of time and talent provided by our volunteers are just as important as financial contributions. There is a volunteer opportunity to fit anyone’s unique skills and personality. To become a volunteer, attend a two-hour Volunteer Information Session. Information sessions are typically held once per month.

Learn more at: www.hospicegso.org/volunteer/

Be An Advocate.

Lastly, you can become a resource for your friends and family by telling others about the support available at HPCG. Learn about our variety of services. Like our page on Facebook, and share relevant posts with friends. Memorize our website URL (www.hospicegso.org), and refer people to the website for more information. By taking these simple steps, you can help spread HPCG’s mission, services and offerings throughout the community.

“^A kind gesture can reach a wound that only compassion can heal.”

New Members Elected to HPCG Board of Directors and HFGG Board of Trustees

October 1 marked the start of a new fiscal year for Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG), including the election of two new board members. In addition, the Hospice Foundation of Greater Greensboro (HFGG) elected one new trustee.

Joining the HPCG Board of Directors is:

Devin Griffith, MPA, MSW is vice president of regional development at Advanced Home Care in High Point. Griffith has worked in the health care field for 26 years and spent 16 years with Randolph Hospital as vice president of care continuum and support services. He holds a master’s degree in social work from the UNC-Chapel Hill and his master’s in public administration from High Point University. In 2014, he received the Ellen B. Winston Award for his work for seniors, the disabled and terminally ill patients, from the North Carolina Association of Home and Hospice Care.

Kenneth J. Rempher, PhD, RN, MS, MBA, CENP is executive vice president and chief nurse executive at Cone Health, where he is responsible for the clinical practice of more than 3,000 nurses across the Cone Health system. Over his 25-year career, Dr. Rempher has also contributed significantly to education and research through many publications and presentations. He received his BSN from the University of Minnesota, his MS degree in nursing from the University of Maryland, an MBA from the University of Baltimore, and a PhD from the University of Maryland.

Joining the HFGG Board of Trustees is:

Tiffany Derby Crenshaw is founder and CEO of Intellect Resources, a talent acquisition firm for the health care information technology industry. Crenshaw brings vast experience in health care recruiting, leadership, marketing, project management, account management, volunteerism and sales. She holds an Associates of Arts degree from Peace College and a Bachelor of Arts degree in journalism and mass communication from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Supporting a Grieving Friend this Holiday Season

For many grieving people, the holiday season is a long-dreaded, difficult period. If you have a friend or loved one who is grieving this time of the year, your support can be very meaningful and help make a painful time easier. Here are some quick tips:

Ask Questions.
Ask your friend how they are doing, and inquire how you might be of help. Your friend’s needs may change frequently; remember to be supportive by asking more than once.

Be a Good Listener.
If your friend does want to talk about grief, supportive listening is the key. Sometimes there is no right thing to say and being present with your friend is enough.

Be There.
The most meaningful way to help a friend is to be there through the ups and downs of grief. Even if time has passed since the loss, you may ask how she or he is doing during this holiday season.

Planning for the 12th Annual Corks for Kids Path is Underway!

A dedicated planning committee is already hard at work creating the 12th annual Corks for Kids Path!

Chairing this year’s effort is Morgan Morisette Hood, who has served on the planning committee for many years. Hood’s passion for Kids Path was sparked long before her participation with the annual fundraiser. Her first introduction to Kids Path was as a Girl Scout.

“My troop assisted with the initial design and planting of the Healing Garden at Kids Path,” recalled Hood. “Throughout the years, this garden has helped many families walk through times of grieving, providing them a sacred space for healing.”

Armed with this deep appreciation of Kids Path—HPCG’s program that helps children coping with illness and grief—Hood is poised to build on the tremendous success of Greensboro’s premier wine-tasting event.

“I feel like my life has come full circle in the most amazing way,” she said. “I am beyond excited to work alongside a committee full of caring individuals whose efforts throughout the next four months will ultimately provide essential support for Kids Path to continue its heartfelt mission.”

Scheduled for Friday, March 8, 2019, Corks for Kids Path will take place at the Cadillac Service Garage, an industrial urban loft venue in the heart of downtown Greensboro. The event will include an amazing sampling of wines, a silent auction and heavy hors d’oeuvres.

Since the creation of Corks for Kids Path, Zeto, Greensboro’s foremost wine shop, has curated wines for the event. In addition, the local business donates all profits from any wine sales that result from the event. “We are so excited to continue our support,” said Penny Demetriades, Zeto co-owner.

Crumley Roberts will also return as presenting sponsor. Visit www.corksforkidspath.org for more information.

Some members of the 2019 Corks for Kids Path Planning Committee: Maryanne Cardwell, Megan Cardwell, Lindsey Greear, Morgan Hood, Lydia Whitley and Emily Barringer.
Tri for Hospice hosted two events that benefited Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG) in 2018. Collectively, Gears and Steers, a spring bicycle ride, and Try a Tri for Hospice, a fall triathlon, raised more than $15,000.

On Sunday, April 8, Gears and Steers participants took a challenging ride on a countryside course. Afterwards, riders returned to the Summerfield Bicycle Shop to enjoy grilled burgers, side dishes, delicious gelato and beer. Thanks to generous sponsors, donors, riders and the diligent efforts of many volunteers, this event raised $6,400 for HPCG.

Try a Tri for Hospice, held at Ridgewood Swim and Tennis Club on September 1, was the most successful event to date. Not only did it raise more than $8,600, but the number of participants also nearly doubled over the previous year. The course includes a 200-meter swim, a 10-mile bike ride and a 2-mile run through the rolling hills of the Ridgewood neighborhood.

Karen Buxton, founder and organizer of these Tri for Hospice events, shared her pride in the fact that they continue to grow and raise more money each year.

“Our Tri for Hospice team works diligently to present safe, well-organized and enjoyable events,” explained Buxton. “However, we couldn’t do any of this without the generosity of our sponsors, many of whom have been with us since the beginning.”

Since its inception seven years ago, Tri for Hospice has raised more than $110,000 for HPCG. This outstanding achievement demonstrates the impact of their partnership and the appropriateness of their tag line:

Tri for Hospice . . . Caring to the Finish.

Dancing Clubs Generate Donations

The Folk, Round and Square Dance Federation clubs of North Carolina donated $1,389 to Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG) in September. The clubs have been promenading to raise money since 1990, and the proceeds from their efforts have been distributed to 35 hospices across the state. To date, HPCG has received over $82,000!

HPCG Teen Volunteers Help Homeless Veterans

On September 20, the HPCG Teen Volunteer group assembled more than 150 individual bags of personal items for the 2018 Triad Stand Down event, which helps homeless veterans in the community.

Under the leadership of HPCG volunteer coordinator, Frorhonda Jones, and group advisor and mentor, Danielle Crosby, the teen group meets monthly to work on projects and learn more about hospice services.

“We are so proud to have such an aspirational group of teens on our HPCG team!” said Jones.

As part of the We Honor Veterans program, HPCG staff, volunteers and partnering agencies collected items for this project, including lip balm, hand sanitizer, gum, rain ponchos and packs of tissue.
Westminster Presbyterian Church Organizes Day of Service

One Great Day of Service, held on Sunday, September 30, 2018, offered Westminster Presbyterian Church volunteers of all ages (below) an opportunity to serve individuals and organizations throughout the community. Three of those projects were chaired by Ann Comfort for the benefit of patients and families served by Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro.

“Cooking for Kids Path,” organized by Sandra Sprinkle, was a big success. Volunteers created, baked and wrapped 30 delicious casseroles. For dessert, a group of young chefs baked dozens of chocolate chip cookies. Delivered later by the Kids Path team, these homemade meals were a great treat for families.

“Sundaes on Sunday,” organized by Justin Harty, served ice cream sundaes with lots of toppings for Beacon Place patients and their visitors. The group consisting of children and adults lifted spirits with their kindness and presence.

“Kids Path Pillows,” organized by Daphne Haverkamp, resulted in a supply of brightly colored pillows to be shared with children and teens receiving grief counseling from Kids Path. Using fleece and bandana fabric, volunteers formed heart-shaped pillows and hand-tied the seams. These pillows will offer comfort to children navigating a difficult time.

Many thanks to Westminster Presbyterian Church volunteers. It was a really great day.

Triad Chevy Club Holds Car Show

Triad Chevy Club and event sponsor Bill Black Chevrolet held its 24th Annual Car Show on Saturday, June 9. Event proceeds were divided between this year’s designated charities: Hospice and Palliative Care of Greensboro (HPCG), JDRF’s Piedmont Triad Chapter and Ronald McDonald House in Winston-Salem.

The show featured 37 classes of cars, as well as trucks and motorcycles. New, restored and one-of-a-kind vehicles were proudly displayed by their owners.

Chairing this year’s event was club president, Chuck Bottomley, who sang the praises of fellow club members. “This is a team effort,” explained Bottomley. “Our club members work hard, as do the folks at Bill Black Chevrolet.” He offered a special word of thanks to general manager Jerry McPherson and his team who relocated and returned several hundred cars from their showroom lot to make room for the show.

Bottomley also acknowledged the club’s pride in the way they give back to their community. “Many of us have family and friends who have needed the services of this year’s beneficiaries. That fact inspires all of us to work harder!”

Thank you, Triad Chevy Club members! Since 2015, they have donated more than $43,000 to HPCG from their annual charity car shows.
